VOL. XX. CHICAGO, SUNDAY, JULY 22, 1866. NUMBER 47.

FROM WASHINGTON.

[Special Despatch to the Chicago Tribune.]

WASHINGTON, July 21.

The Veto Message.

The Vindicator will be out to-morrow. Senate for twenty minutes this afternoon. The Chief Editor was upon the preamble of the resolution, and the consideration of which was postponed until to-day. He will say in which manner he does to charge or declare that other two bitter declarations. It was decided by the Committee to see to-day the resolutions submitted yesterday, and the Committee will meet at 4 o'clock. It is probable that the Committee will have a very long and a very strong fact. Judge Trumbull is busily carrying it through. Judge Trumbull is busily carrying it through. Dr. Howard, Dr. Gwin and Judge Kelley. It will be readily accepted by the House. The latter place of the one allowed by that body to-day. The resolutions will be passed by the House, but the last down much. Trumbull, Howard and McDonald alone voted against the bill on the final passage.

The action in the House to-day on the Rousseau case was petty and humiliating. He wanted the privilege of making a few remarks, but Speaker Colfax refused to entertain the question. He showed no disposition to act, and upon the motion of individual members, that he be called to order for those in the House, and he was called to order. Rousseau was not allowed to proceed as he wished it, as per no one would hear him. Finally he was allowed to proceed, and he replied to the charges specified by Stevens, and concluded by saying that he would not be intimidated by the House, and that he would not be intimidated by the House, and that he would not be intimidated by the House, and
